From the Director

As summer days steadily move on and a return to school is on the horizon for the kids, August becomes the perfect time to get reacquainted with the Library. We provide many engaging things to do in order to escape the mid-summer heat.

We have audiobooks and e-books to inspire those who are still planning to take a vacation. You can read the latest issue of many popular magazines on Flipster while relaxing by the pool, even if you don’t have Wi-Fi. Just download the magazine onto your device. We also have a lot of indoor activities, perfect for when you want to escape the heat and the rain. Plan to attend one of our end-of-summer ice cream socials or take in a movie or an arts and crafts class. To keep your mind active, enjoy games and book discussions. We also have activities to keep your body active like our Tai Chi classes sponsored by the Friends in memory of former Library employee, Rachel Mick.

Libraries are a cornerstone of our educational system, and this month we focus on helping parents, students and teachers prepare for the new school year. There are a number of activities to equip you and your child for kindergarten and to keep your body active like our Tai Chi classes sponsored by the Friends of the Library in memory of former Library employee, Rachel Mick.

Read on to explore the world of unlimited possibilities available at the Library.

GET READY FOR SCHOOL
USING OUR ONLINE TOOLS

It is that time of year when we go to the store to stock up on school supplies and prepare for the first day of school. The Library can help you and your child prepare for the big day.

Has your child read all the materials on their Summer Reading lists?
Have they brushed up on their math skills?
Is your high school student prepared to take the SAT?

You can stop in at one of our branches or you can join other savvy library members and access our convenient electronic resources from home.

Students can brush up on their skills with LearningExpress. This e-resource has math, reading, and writing resources for elementary, middle and high school students. There is also a section for college bound students to help them prepare for the ACT and SAT tests, and get help writing their college admissions essay. High school students can also find resources to prepare for the PSAT/NMSQT test and AP exams.

Tutor.com/Live Homework Help offers real tutors online who can help you with your math, science, English and social studies homework. Work out your algebra problems with a math expert, or send your report to an English expert to help with spelling, grammar or sentence structure. In college, or out of school? There are experts standing by to help you with calculus, or even writing résumés and cover letters.

Students working on research projects will find news and journal articles, and facts and figures, using online resources including Research in Context, World Almanac for Kids, Biography in Context, and InfoTrac General OneFile. Try these from home, or ask your librarian for more information about finding just the information you need to write a report, or prepare for a debate topic.

NOT JUST FOR KIDS
EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES FOR ADULTS TOO

LearningExpress has skill review sections for math, reading, science, grammar and writing. You can also prepare for college placement and CLEP exams. There is also a section to help you prepare for graduate school admissions. This site offers assistance if you want to change careers or want to earn a certification in a new field. In addition, you can refresh your skills on the latest versions of popular software such as Microsoft Word or Excel, or use LearningExpress to prepare for the NCLEX-RN or the ASVAB.

Tutor.com offers a wealth of resources for adults also. You can prep for the Citizenship Test or get help with your career by connecting with a career coach or having your résumé reviewed.

Your library card is your key to these valuable tools for education! Take advantage of the convenient access from your home or office, at www.pbclibrary.org/online-research.
If You Give a Child a Reading Level …

In the style of Laura Numeroff

If you have a child in school, chances are they have a reading level.

If your child has a reading level, chances are you have had a hard time finding books that are either appropriate, appealing or available.

Some “suggested reading” lists automatically generated by schools, or even the companies that created “reading levels” and the like, contain books that are so old, they are out of print. If you've ever gone into one of our locations and asked for the Reading Counts* binder, you are probably already familiar with this. Some lists are so lengthy that it's overwhelming and unproductive when looking for books the Library does not own or ultimately for books kids are not interested in reading.

So, we have created a page on our website where you can search books in the collection by reading level. If the book is not available at your branch, you can click “Place Hold” and select your local branch and you will get an alert when your materials are ready.

All of the books featured on the webpage are in the Library System's children's or teen collections. No more wondering whether your fourth grader with an exceptionally high Lexile measure is ready for "War and Peace!"

While it is quite important to select books that your child enjoys reading to develop an affinity for learning, the Library System has plenty to offer that is appealing to both children and their teachers. The two do not need to be mutually exclusive! Sometimes you just need a little help in finding the information.

Visit www.pbclibrary.org/levels to find books that are appropriate, appealing and available. This feature is just another way the Library System can help you help your child succeed in school.

*Added Bonus: If your child's class utilizes Reading Counts, we've added an icon to the books that have accompanying quizzes!

Lexile levels provided by the Lexile website. Guided Reading Levels obtained from the publishing company, where available; otherwise, from Scholastic Book Wizard. Reading Counts point values and quiz availability retrieved from the Palm Beach County School District's website at the end of the 2018 school year.

Fictional Coming of Age Story

For strong women of any age.

“How to Be Famous,” by Caitlin Moran

Dolly Wilde is 19 years old, lives on her own in a London flat and writes about new music for a popular British magazine. She’s a talented writer, albeit somewhat immature, and makes a bad decision to have a one-night stand with a famous comedian. Slut shaming soon follows and in light of the #metoo movement, makes this book both timely and important. Eventually, through her own inimitable personality, Dolly pushes through the pain, turns the shame into her own kind of fame, and wins the man of her dreams. While set more than twenty years ago, this coming of age story feels very topical.

Science Fiction

Love the alternate universe travel.

“Dark Matter,” by Blake Crouch

This novel has great atmosphere, it is dark at times but not heavily so as to bring you down. The action is consistent throughout and fun. Instead of the usual time travel story, this book travels to alternate universes that are either very similar or very different to the protagonist’s own. Crouch brings up several questions for thought including: what would you do to get back to the universe where you originated.

Fantasy Fiction

Wonderful humor and wit for soldiers turned thieves.

“The Palace Job,” by Patrick Weekes

Overwhelming humor and wit, with addition cleverness that character demonstrated as they break out of jail and break into high security building for an Elvin Manuscript, make it impossible to put the book down. The prisoner Lock breaks out of prison to steal back her family’s heirloom. Along the way she puts together a team, each with different skills. The collective group is a bunch of misfits that is pure fun to watch as they travel around together. Along the way they run into inspectors, enemies, and love interest. The book is just so much fun to read!

Jewish Historical Fiction

The fictional story and history of “Crypto Jews” in New Mexico.

“Gateway to the Moon,” by Mary Morris

This is a fascinating novel about the persecution of Jewish people in the time of the Spanish Inquisition and how there came to be “unknown” Jewish descendants in New Mexico. Told in alternating narratives set in different time periods (past and present), it got confusing at times, but this is one of those rare books for me that had a satisfying ending with an interesting beginning.

Satirical Fiction

Now an AMC Original Series.

“Dietland,” by Sarai Walker

Plum Kettle is a ghost writer for the teen magazine advice column and has decided to have weight loss surgery to end a lifetime of failed dieting. On her journey she is recruited by feminist group, “Calliope House.” At the same time a guerrilla group called “Jennifer” is carrying out violent acts against those who mistreat women. Plum soon finds herself at the center of a feminist conspiracy. The book has been described as part “Fight Club,” part “Bridget Jones Diary”.
